

I am on Mr and Mrs Grinling's side. I feel really sorry for them because lovely Mrs Grinling works so hard to prepare a delicious and appetising lunch for Mr Grinling and those horrible seagulls steal it. Mrs Grinling is kind and clever and she makes all of the food from scratch. It's a lot of hard work and those rude and nasty seagulls don't even care. Mr Grinling has to get up really early in the morning and he is industrious. By lunch time he must be starving and it is completely wrong that the seagulls steal from him when they don't do any work at all. And what about poor Hamish? Those seagulls were really nasty to him. He was really frightened and they were teasing him. I don't like those seagulls at all. They are the rats of the sky and I think they should be punished for being so brazen.

I am on the side of the seagulls. They are not nasty and horrible. They are beautiful creatures and they don't know any better. They are just simple birds and they were hungry. You can't blame them for taking the delicious lunch because it must have looked so tempting. Why can't Mrs Grinling prepare two lunches? One for the ravenous seagulls and one for greedy Mr Grinling. Or they could put up a bird feeder for them. They are just harmless seagulls. Anyway, why can't Mr Grinling pack his own lunch and take it with him in his rowing boat? He must be really lazy! The seagulls couldn't find food anywhere else and they had no choice.
